

32 Tulsa-area students receive National Merit Scholarships

FROM STAFF REPORTS

The National Merit Scholarship Program announced its final round of winners Tuesday, with 32 Tulsa-area students receiving college-sponsored awards.

The students were among 3,500 high school seniors being chosen this year to receive $500 to $2,000 annually for up to four years of study, according to a release from the privately funded, not-for-profit organization.

Officials at 178 sponsor colleges and universities throughout 44 states and Washington, D.C., selected their scholarship winners from National Merit finalists who choose to attend their institution.

More winners of college-sponsored Merit Scholarship awards will be announced July 16. By the end of the 2018 competition, about 7,500 academic champions will have been selected to receive National Merit Scholarships worth about $31 million, the organization said.

Winners are candidates who were judged to have the strongest combination of academic skills and achievements, extracurricular accomplishments and potential for success in rigorous college studies.

The National Merit Scholarship Program is in its 63rd year.
